TPM Journey: Short Response Prompts

What led you or your organization to TPM? What was the challenge, beyond just "a skills gap" that you identified in your community where you said to yourself "the TPM approach could potentially fix this…"? *

Viewport (Width : 1351px , Height :770px)

Some people call this their "aha" moment, where they realized that a problem was bigger than they thought so they had to step back, or changed the lens with which they were looking at the problem and looked somewhere new to find the answer.

What is your TPM implementation model or structure (state-wide, regional, employer specific, etc)? Is this a model that you think other states/businesses could use and repeat in their community? *

We have heard stories of statewide adoption, or great stories of a business champion leading the charge and making TPM happen for their local industry, or the chamber/business association gathering the right players to make connections and pitch TPM where they knew it mattered.

What partnership(s) were key to successfully launching and sustaining your TPM work? *

This could be a particular employer champion, community organization, local or state government, an individual, etc. You could also have multiple key partners that brought this to fruition.

Once you got started with TPM, what was the biggest challenge or hurdle you faced? *

You may not have seen this challenge coming, or maybe you did, but what was the stumbling block that you had to get past to make TPM take hold in a strong, sustainable way? If you're not there yet, that's okay! You might be in the middle of your stumbling block as we speak. Just

How have you defined and captured your success to date? Do you plan to make any changes to this for the future? *

Do you have measurable data connected to results or outcomes from your TPM work thus far? *

☐ Yes

☐ No

We would love to collect data that helps tell your TPM story that we can keep updating. Think of something that is connected to your process that we could check back in on and expect improvement to over time. This could be in the form of new jobs filled over time, or TPM demand planning outcomes relative to the state economic projections, or maybe showing increased engagement from a local school. This also might include HR numbers such as less time to fill open positions.
